

FUSION TICKET IS BLAMED FOR G. O. P. APATHY

Falling Off in Registration Is Heaviest in the Republican Districts.

SWELLED AT FINISH.

Leaders Get Busy and Make Good Record on Last Day Lists Are Open.

The record of a year ago was eclipsed yesterday by political workers of all parties who made a desperate effort, and in every borough surpassed the totals for 1906 for the last day of registration.

In view of the slump shown on the first three days this year the result was a surprise.

Results from the Republican districts of the city indicate that the reports that Republicans in angry disgust with the fusion ticket, would decline to register, were not without foundation. The fall-off in many marked in Republican strongholds than in those of Tammany.

On the other hand, in the Sullivan districts below Fourteenth street the decrease will average probably less than 2,000 an Assembly district.

Figures of registration by Assembly districts, revised for the fourth day of 1907, and showing the total for the four days, are as follows in Greater New York:

FIGHT WILL THAT ENRICHES DOCTOR

Uncle and Cousins of Miss Wilson Say Owsley Unduly Influenced Her.

Herbert H. Maass, in behalf of Oliver P. Hawkins, and David R. Cohn, for Charles, Emma, Mary and David Hawkins, filed today notices at the Surrogate's office, of a contest of the will of Miss Frances J. Wilson, who died at the Colonial Hotel, Columbus avenue and Eighty-first street, last month, leaving an estate of $200,000 or more.

The will was executed May 21, 1906, and after bequests of jewelry and other personal belongings to several friends, left $10,000 to the Babes' Hospital; $10,000 to the Seaside Fund of St. George's Church, in memory of her father, Capt. John Wilson, who died at sea, and $10,000 to St. Luke's Home for Aged Women.

Then followed a bequest of $5,000 to a child of Dr. Henry P. Owsley, her physician, and the balance of the estate was left in trust for the use of Dr. Owsley for life. At his death the estate was to be divided into three parts, of which one part was to go to the University of Virginia, one to Johns Hopkins University, and the third to St. John's College, Annapolis, Md.

Other relatives were ignored by Miss Wilson in her will, and her uncle, Oliver Hawkins, and his cousins, the other contestants, declare in their complaint that she was unduly influenced by Dr. Henry P. Owsley, and that she was not mentally competent to make her will.

It will be contended that Miss Wilson was addicted to liquor, and that her death was due to alcoholism.

METZ WON'T STAND FOR GOLD INKLETS

Comptroller Objects Also to Bagdad Rugs in Richmond Borough Hall.

No more luxury in city office surroundings. No more attractive upholstery, sandal wood paneling, marble statuary or Louis XV. decorations for private offices of public officials.

Comptroller Metz has put his foot down on extravagance. Too much money is wasted, the Comptroller declares, on costly office furnishings.

Borough President Cronwell, of Richmond, is the first head to be officially seen to be shot at. The Comptroller gaped when he ran a discriminating eye down the long list of furnishings ordered by Mr. Cronwell for the adorning of the interior of the new borough hall.

There were emblazoned antlers, gold-lined inkstands, rugs of rarest fabric, paintings in oil, burnished androis, solid brass cuspidors engraved with the city's coat of arms, vases of exquisite finish, cut glass of rare design, velvet chairs of mahogany and other embellishments.

"An art palace for Richmond," exclaimed the Comptroller. "Not on its official life nor any other borough. Such extravagance. Such taste. Such aestheticism."

Then the Comptroller declared against the Richmond furnishing bills in particular and the extravagance of department heads in general.

"How much are those gold-lined inkstands?" the Comptroller asked the auditor.

"Thirty-nine dollars and ninety-nine cents, sir."

"How much for the Bagdad rug?"

"One hundred and eighty-nine dollars, sir."

"How much for those cuspidors?"

"Three hundred dollars a dozen, sir."

"And the mahogany armchairs?"

"Twenty-nine dollars each, sir."

"Kidney-went, three that bill for once. It doesn't go here. Send it back."

Unless Mr. Cronwell is satisfied with a box filled with sand for a cuspidor, from inkwells his Richmond County seat will remain unadorned.

WANTS TO ADD TO COAST ARTILLERY

Maj. Taylor Says State National Guard Should Have Two More Regiments.

Major W. J. Taylor, of the Thirteenth Regiment, was the first witness called today at the continued session of the Wainwright Commission, which is probing into the conduct of the State National Guard. He said that the National Guard would be greatly improved by the incorporation of at least two more regiments into the Coast Artillery.

He pointed out that the Coast Artillery was the weakest branch of the Federal service.

"I cannot take the view," he said, "that the National Guard is purely a State organization. It is not a police force of a State constabulary. Their services belong to the whole country."

Capt. Sidney Grant, of Company D, Thirteenth Regiment, spoke against the serving of second-hand uniforms to enlisted men. He thought it would be well to change the law requiring officers of the different regiments to make advances that a bill has been paid before the money can be collected from the treasurer. He said he understood that it was the custom of the officers to make advances when they were paid when it has not, but that receipt had been obtained on the understanding that the bills would be paid upon receipt of the voucher from Albany.
